SELF-DENIAL APPEAL

To the people of the 'Crows'

Next Pass:

Once again the call for help to carry on the world-wide work of the Salvation Army comes to us. Our work is never finished; our hearts are never wearied; our doors are never shut, and the sun never goes down on our labors for the distressed and hungry. As I write this letter to you, I am interrupted by a hungry man—a stranger and friendless. Scarcely ever a day goes by but what we are called upon to help these unfortunate, and in the name of Christ we cannot refuse them.

Today the Salvation Army is doing more for the world than ever before. In far-off China, seventeen thousand in one centre alone are being cared for daily. In our own country the Salvation Army officer reaches to the poorest in penal institutions, hospitals, rescue homes and homes of vice—wherever there is need, we are pledged to help.

Very soon we shall be asking you to help us with our Self-Denial appeal. We need helpers, young people to become missionaries, doctors, nurses, officers of the work and evangelists. Perhaps you cannot offer your life in this way, though your heart be with us. Will you not help us then with your substance, and be assured of our pledge to you that we will not fail in the time of need.

Yours faithfully,

FRED B. HEWITT, Capt.,
Box 240, Coleman, Alberta.

ST. PATRICK'S ENTERTAINMENT IS SUCCESSFUL EVENT

The annual St. Patrick's entertainment, staged in the Columbus hall last night under the auspices of St. Anne's Catholic church, was as usual well attended and much enjoyed.

The programme opened with a selection by the West Canadian Colliers' Band, under direction of Mr. G. W. Goodwin, of Bellevue.

The main feature of the programme was a three-act farce comedy, entitled "Here Comes Charlie," in which all artists excelled themselves. Following were the characters portrayed: Mary Malone, cook at the Elliot home, Miss Dorothy Campbell; Officer Tim McGrath, Nora's sweetheart, E. Beigan; Mrs. Fanny Parnham, Larry's aunt by marriage, Miss Anne Kuhl; Larry Elliot, a young business king, John Dobek; Ted Hartley, Larry's old-time college pal, Jack Tompkins; Vivian Smyth; Larry's fiancée, Miss Doris Sartoris; Uncle Alec Twigg, in charge of Charlie, Andrew Huchala; Charlie Hoggie, Larry's ward, Miss Rita Pungall; Mrs. Caroline Smyth-Kersey, Vivian's mother, Miss A. Aschacher; Mortimer Smyth-Kersey, Vivian's brother, Angelo Pozzi.

Time, the present; and place, Larry Elliot's home in a suburb of St. Louis in late summer.

Chorus, dances, etc., constituted the balance of the programme, which wound up with the singing of "God Save Ireland," and the National Anthem.

Twelve-page programmes were distributed. These were printed by The Enterprise job printing department. The programme is being repeated tonight, and in all probability will be staged in the near future in one or more of the neighboring towns.

ABERHART REFUSES TO GIVE PUBLIC INFORMATION

Supplying figures on the number of temporary and permanent employees in the provincial government service was asked every year and the information was "not in the public interest," said Premier Aberhart in the legislature.

E. L. Gray, Liberal leader, had asked the number of permanent and temporary employees in the service of the government on March 1, 1935, and July 1, 1937.

CRANBROOK TO MARK ARRIVAL OF RAILWAY

Celebrations of the 40th anniversary of the coming of the railway to Cranbrook, on the Crows' Nest line in East Kootenay, will be in the form of an "Old Home Week" this coming September. The dates for the event will be arranged to coincide with the annual visit of Sir Edward Beatty, G.B.E., K.C., LL.D., chairman and president of the company, who, together with other officials, has signified his intentions of being present.

Many old-timers who saw the first train arrive will be present to help reconstruct the momentous event. Hugh Brock, engineer of the first train four decades ago, will be on hand to pilot the engine of the anniversary train, while J. Sarvis, engineer, and F. Genest, conductor, original fireman and trainman respectively, will also be there to play their part in the celebration.

Plans for a week of festivity are already well in hand. A special committee has the names of more than a thousand former residents, who will be invited to plan their holidays to participate in the anniversary celebration.

The coming of the railway into East Kootenay opened up an era of prosperity in which towns expanded and railway, lumbering and mining payrolls ran into hundreds of thousands. In '98 and '99 and the first years of the century carloads of lumber rolled to the prairies, which were rapidly filling with settlers. Coal from Crows' Nest Pass mines moved east and west, supplying railway, industrial and domestic needs. Ore from the great Kimberley mines, which had hitherto gone down the Kootenay river by boat, was hauled to the smelters.

As whistles of the new trains echoed and re-echoed among the mountains, large crews of section hands cribbed the new banks against slides, set breakwaters in rivers to protect the new roadbed against changing currents, strengthened bridges, and in other ways perfected the hazardous Crows' Nest right-of-way.—C.P.R. NEWS FROM EDMONTON

(By T. B. Windrows)

Edmonton, March 14.—Debt legislation introduced into the Alberta legislature last week, as provided in two bills sponsored by Lucien Maynard, proved to be little more than extension of a moratorium, through impending any foreclosure action, but at the same time taking no action to reduce debts.

One of the bills provides that no foreclosure action against any farm home is to be entertained in a court at all, and that any foreclosure action against a home in a city, town or village may be proceeded with, only when the applicant has posted $2,000, which is to be turned over to the occupant of the home if the foreclosure is executed.

The other bill provides that debtors may apply to the debt adjustment board to have themselves brought under the wing of a new plan by which the debtor is to deposit one-quarter of his income with the debt adjustment board for distribution among his creditors, and having done that the debtor is free from other efforts to collect debts.

The two bills are regarded as companions to the bill, now before the house, which extends the moratorium for another year by statute. There has been no legislation at all so far, however, to reduce debts, although some plan which would cut principal has been rumored for the past year. Although protected from any prosecution for debt, Alberta citizens continue to owe as much as ever, without help from the legislature.

From the Liberal side of the house last week came a proposal that the provincial government set up a large number of debt adjustment boards—enough to cover all parts of the province—which would study the situation between each debtor and creditor and endeavor to reach an understanding between them for reduction of debt. In cases where a satisfactory adjustment could not be agreed upon with the debt board itself, the board established under the federal Farmers' Creditors' Arrangements act would be asked to intercede and establish a settlement.

By such a system of debt adjustment boards, providing the personnel of the boards was of high calibre and undoubted integrity, a large proportion of Alberta citizens' debts could be scaled down within a few weeks, the Liberals declared. But the provincial government had no comment to make on the proposal, and no action to take on the plan.

James Heston, independent member of the house, said that he crossed the floor in 1936 and so became the first man to bolt the Social Credit party after the 1935 election, delivered during the week his first speech since he took his seat in the house. Although attacked by the government, and threatened to force a by-election in his constituency if any member or agent of the government attempted to prevent him from doing and saying what his own conscience guided him, the whole house applauded him repeatedly.

It is in the financial interests of the Alberta government itself that farmers in Alberta are now lacking the short-term credit which many of them need to finish the year's crop, Mr. Hansen declared in a thoughtful, calm and dispassionate speech.

By its legislation, which has done no one any good, the government has wrecked the credit of the people of Alberta; and credit is not just some thing to talk about, but a very real asset, which, when it exists, means dollars and cents in profit to those who have it, Mr. Hansen said.

By ruining that credit, he declared, the provincial government has actually decreased purchasing power because it has become necessary for farmers to hoard their cash instead of being assured that they can get short term credits, with additional purchasing power, when they need it.

When Mr. Hansen sat down the Social Credit private members pounded their desks, and N. B. James, of Acadia, declared that although the Taber member had left the Social Credit party, he had the respect of every member of that side of the house.

DOUGLAS WAS RIGHT

While the court has halted abruptly in Canada, Major C. H. Douglas has been proved right. He told Premier Aberhart during his visit to Alberta that Social Credit of that kind that was formulated at Fig Tree Court would not work within the constitutional restrictions that surround it in Canada. He and the premier disagreed, and the expert left Mr. Aberhart to carry on with a type of Social Credit which has since been defined as "Aberhartism," in contrast with the Douglas doctrine—Christian Science Monitor.

George Kerr and Frank Edl will journey to Lethbridge this week end, where on Sunday night, between 9.30 and 10 o'clock, they will appear in a broadcast programme sponsored by Imperial Motors and Blairmore Motors.

VON RIBBENTROP CONFERS WITH VISCOUNT HALIFAX

London.—Shouting crowds taunted Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Germany's new foreign minister, as he sought means of a settlement with Great Britain in the face of increasing European unrest.

Von Ribbentrop and Viscount Halifax, British foreign secretary, conferred at the foreign office for more than two hours.

What the former ambassador to London and the peer discussed was concealed behind diplomatic secrecy. Reliable sources, however, said the conference was inconclusive.

Von Ribbentrop, these sources declared, declined to commit his government without further instructions from Chancellor Hitler.

The British government, at whose request Von Ribbentrop was said to have conferred at this time, apparently was convinced, these sources said, that the moment was not ripe for going on with negotiations.

Germany's request for recognition of her right to colonies, and swift developments across the English channel, possibly gave the conversation a wide scope.

These obstacles were added to broad gaps between the outlooks of Germany and Britain on fundamental issues.

Although informed persons emphasized the foreign minister's talk was "exploratory," they said an apparent decision on the colonial question made an early agreement improbable.

Britain and France, which hold League of Nations mandates over most of Germany's former colonies, are understood to insist, the colonials question be coupled with a general European agreement.

As the German foreign minister stepped from his car at the ambassador's entrance to the foreign office, he raised his hat and smiled. "Ribbentrop get out!" came the hostile shout from the assembled crowd.

For 2½ hours Von Ribbentrop talked over Anglo-German problems with Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax. For 2½ hours the crowd waited along the approaches, increasing in numbers as the time went on. Then, as Von Ribbentrop emerged, the crowd again showed "Ribbentrop get out!" The demonstrators, mostly young men, evidently were shouting at a pre-arranged signal.

Not in the worst days of cabinet crisis has Downing street seen so many police. They stood at every point of possible attack. Reinforcements stood under the archways. More waited in the foreign office courtyard. A police car preceded Von Ribbentrop as he drove back to the German embassy.

During his talk with Lord Halifax the crowd outside swelled from the 30 who had greeted Von Ribbentrop on his arrival with clenched fist salutes (the Communist gesture) almost under his nose.

Von Ribbentrop was reported to have stressed the German view that Chancellor Hitler, as head of state, should be spared newspaper attacks. Lord Halifax, while refusing to urge restraint on the press, holds that criticisms of Hitler's actions are justified, since he is also in the position of a premier at the head of a government.

Governors Of C.B.C. To Be Questioned Regarding Activities

Ottawa.—Governors of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will be called before the select committee of the House of Commons investigating activities of the corporation, it was decided as the committee met for organization, elected Arthur L. Beaumont (Lib., Provence) chairman.

The governors, who will be in Ottawa for the annual meeting of the corporation March 21 and 22, will be called before the general manager, Gladstone Murray, and other officials are called for examination.

It was agreed, committee members may submit written questions to the chairman for submission to officials of the corporation, and they will bring to the committee the information required to answer them.

Winnipeg Financial Affairs

Winnipeg.—Four hundred representatives of Winnipeg business, largest delegation ever to appear before the Manitoba legislature, pleaded to the provincial government and the city to speed up negotiations for settlement of Winnipeg's relief emergency. Chief request was for an independent commission to investigate financial affairs of Winnipeg.

Dispute Over Islands

Britain And United States May Submit Matter To Arbitration

London.—British diplomatic sources, commenting on Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement in the House of Commons that Great Britain could not recognize the United States government's claim to the South Sea Islands of Canton and Enderbury, declared London would propose joint sovereignty over the disputed territories.

If the United States turns this down, they said, Britain will suggest arbitration, but whatever the solution, it must take in both powers' requirements for aeroplane landing facilities on the islands, according to well-informed opinion.

Mr. Chamberlain, answering Conservative and opposition questions, said:

"His Majesty's government maintain all their rights to the Phoenix group of islands. Last year the United States government contested the validity of the British claim to the Phoenix group of islands, in which Canton and Enderbury are situated, and decided to refer the order-in-council of March 18, 1937.

"Sir Ronald Lindsay (ambassador to Washington) has been instructed to inform the United States government that His Majesty's government in the United Kingdom cannot regard the jurisdictional situation as in any way affected by their recent action, which included landing on Canton Island.

"This island has been effectively occupied by His Majesty's government, on Aug. 5, 1937, and an administrative officer now resides there. He (Sir Ronald) is instructed to add that His Majesty's government maintain all their rights to the Phoenix group.

"It is intended in the immediate future to submit proposals to the United States government which are as hoped will serve as a basis for ending this controversy in a manner satisfactory to both parties."

Composite Planes

First Official Test In England Proves Satisfactory

Rocheater, Eng.—Test pilots and spectators alike agreed the parting of Britain's two-piece plane in flight was satisfactory in its first official test. It was announced a flight to Canada, possibly United States, is planned for this summer.

The sleek Mercury, riding pick-a-back on heavy Maids, the composite showed trim efficiency when it charged down the Midway river and slipped into the air.

Describing the parting, J. L. Parker, test pilot, said there were four lights in Maids' cockpit. A red light indicated the machines were securely locked together. Two white lights told whether the composite was flying on an even keel—one or the other blinked when it was not. A green light appeared when the parting speed—approximately 140 miles an hour—was reached.

All the while Parker and Mercury's pilot, H. D. Piper, New Zealand, were in telephonic communication.

At 800 feet the planes parted. Maids dropped and Mercury soared. Each craft banked in opposite directions and an accompanying plane was left far behind when Mercury showed her speed.

To Unify Efforts

Reorganization Of Canadian Publicity Offices In Britain

Ottawa.—Hon. W. D. Euler, trade minister, announced unification and reorganization of the exhibition and publicity offices in the United Kingdom and centralization of Canada's official exhibition, advertising and film activities relating to sale of Canadian products and the work of trade commissioners.

The change was made with a view to rendering more efficient the government machinery for advertising and otherwise promoting sale of Canadian goods in the United Kingdom, a departmental statement said.

Consent Not Necessary

Dominions Not Consulted In Regard To Anglo-Italian Negotiations

London.—Prime Minister Chamberlain did not reply when asked in the House of Commons to supply copies of telegrams and replies exchanged with the Dominion governments in regard to Anglo-Italian negotiations.

Arthur Jenkins, Conservative, at question time in the house contended Mr. Chamberlain indicated in connection with the Rome negotiations that consent of the Dominions was not necessary until they were called on to undertake active obligations. 2446

Recommends Vast Park

President Roosevelt Would Negotiate With Canada For Land

Washington.—President Roosevelt said at his press conference he had forwarded to the United States state department a report of the Quetico superior committee, recommending creation of a vast wilderness park in Minnesota and Ontario.

The report proposed federal acquisition of lands in the Canadian side and negotiation of a treaty with Canada regarding the Canadian side of the proposed 100,000-acre park embracing the Rainy lake and Pigeon river watersheds on the Canadian border. It estimated $1,250,000 would be required to purchase necessary land.

BRITISH LABOR PARTY CONDEMNS MOSCOW TRIALS

London.—The Independent Labor party—which holds the left wing of the Labor opposition in the House of Commons—called upon the Soviet government to stop the Moscow trials.

To a cheering House of Commons, Prime Minister Chamberlain declared the United Kingdom had not been "guilty of any breach of their agreement with the Soviet government" not to meddle in each other's internal affairs.

Testimony as to British espionage brought out in the Soviet trial was "totally untrue," he said, adding he doubted they would be given any credit "in this country or, indeed, anywhere outside the Soviet Union."

"The very nature of the confessions," declares a bluntly worded L.L.P. statement handed Russian Ambassador Ivan Maisky, "the manner and technique of the trials and their preparation, and the inconceivable character of the alleged crimes not only fail to convince—they have an opposite effect."

"This is not working class justice. It is barbarous injustice. It is an insult and injury to all international working class ideals and interests. It is not the prisoners who have been on trial in Moscow. It is the system of bureaucracy which has grown up since the time of Lenin."

"We know that in Britain the 'executions' by firing squads and the suicides have only served to paralyze working class opinion on behalf of the U.S.S.R. and to strengthen its measures to isolate the Soviet Union."

"In the name of the victory and unity of the workers of all lands, we call upon you to stop these trials and killings, to empty Soviet prisons of workers now languishing in them and restore the U.S.S.R. to its rightful place—the vanguard of humanity marching towards a free, classless society and to the better day of Socialism."

Peer Leaves Labor Party

London.—Lord Sanderson, blind peer, resigned from the Labor party, declaring the return to power of a Labor government would be a "menace to peace." His resignation followed by a week that of Lord Arnold, paymaster-general in the Labor government.

REGISTS NAZIS

Campaign of Nazis to gain political control of Austria was threatened when Major Emil Fey, former leader of the Heimwehr, called on the once powerful military units to fight for Austrian independence. Fey said he would place a reorganized Heimwehr at the disposal of the Chancellor, declaring he could mobilize 80,000 armed men in two days.

British Cabinet Changes

Minor Reorganization To Free Viscount Halifax Of Other Duties

London.—Prime Minister Chamberlain put through a minor reorganization of the cabinet to free Viscount Halifax of other duties so he may concentrate on foreign affairs.

Unexpectedly the Prime Minister brought Lord Maughan into the cabinet. The 71-year-old former lord of appeal became lord chancellor and speaker of the house of lords.

He succeeded Viscount Halifax, appointed lord president of the council, the post formerly held by Lord Halifax. Another of Lord Halifax's tasks was transferred to other shoulders, Earl Stanhope becoming government leader in the house of lords while remaining president of the board of education.

The series of changes resulted from Anthony Eden's resignation as foreign secretary and Lord Halifax's appointment to succeed him.

The house of lords representation in the cabinet was increased from six to seven. Lord Maughan becomes "keeper of the king's conscience" and the empire's chief legal position as head of the judiciary after a career devoted exclusively to law.

Attacked By Whales

Victoria.—An unidentified Indian fisherman got the fright of his life when his boat was jostled by two playful killer whales. The whales slid up to the small boat, and bumped it around with their powerful tails. The fisherman headed for shore as fast as he could row. The whales followed. One of the men leaped from the boat and was rescued by a nearby boat. The fisherman was close to shore, but wiggled free as the Indian scrambled ashore.

Honor Scientist

Sir William Bragg Receives Award For Outstanding Services

London.—Sir William Bragg, the eminent scientist, was awarded the Institute of Metals medal for outstanding services to the metal industry, both from a scientific and a technical side, at the annual meeting of the Institute here.

W. R. Barclay, retiring president of the Institute, declared Sir William's brilliantly-conceived application of X-rays to the study of the structure of matter had influenced scientific research far beyond the boundaries of that particular branch of applied science represented by the Institute.

WOULD ENLARGE THE POWERS OF FEDERAL HOUSE

Ottawa.—An appeal for an end to bickering and disputes between federal and provincial governments over constitutional responsibilities was made in the House of Commons by Hon. Norman Rogers, minister of labor.

He declared not even the strongest advocate of sectional interests suggested Canada should retreat from its natural destiny, and that the solution did not necessarily lie in surrender on the part of either the federal government or the provinces.

Both interests should work to the end "the federal government shall have power to do what the federal government ought to do and that the provincial governments shall have power to do what the provincial governments ought to do and that each should be given the revenues appropriate to its task or powers of taxation sufficient to raise those revenues."

The minister spoke on a resolution proposed by Oscar Boulanger (Lib., Bellechasse), that the Dominion government should take steps to projects within provincial jurisdiction.

Mr. Boulanger urged Canada should preserve national unity, maintain a strong central government and place upon the provinces the responsibilities that were theirs under the constitution.

While Mr. Rogers said the government could not accept the resolution he agreed with most of Mr. Boulanger's argument and the sitting ended.

The latter withdrew his motion. To accept the proposal now, said the minister, would mean serious dislocation in existing arrangements for social relief, such as unemployment, old age pensions and pensions for the blind.

The practice of grants in aid had grown up largely since the war, said Mr. Rogers. Experience had proved its weakness. It involved the vicious principle of dual responsibility, the Dominion providing the money and the province spending it.

"While dual responsibility is potentially a field of co-operation all too frequently it becomes a field of conflict and friction," he declared. Nothing had done more to retard the adoption of some suitable procedure for amending the constitution than the submission of the moral argument to demands of the provinces that we should assume financial responsibility without assuming administrative powers."

Perhaps after the Rowell commission inquiry was completed and all the facts were before the government and the country a method of amending the constitution and a realignment of responsibilities for social services and taxing powers might be made. Sooner or later it would have to come.

Except for minority rights of race and religion there was no reason why other phases of Canada's constitution should not be changed to meet changing needs. All were agreed upon the reservation of minority rights from any method of changing the constitution.

There should be a "flexible procedure for amendment." By that the minister said he meant it should "at least be possible to transfer jurisdiction from the provinces to the Dominion and from the Dominion to the provinces without obtaining the consent of all the provincial legislatures."

The preservation of unity presented a challenge to all public men and the vices in the present system were not incapable of eradication.

Suggestion For Flag

Ottawa.—Grey Owl, Indian naturalist here on a speaking tour, said he thought Canada should have a flag of her own. "I think that two beavers on the left and two moose on the right, representing the nine provinces, is a fitting design for the Dominion's flag," he said.

OPPOSITION TO POWER EXPORT LICENSES SHOWN

Ottawa.—Threats, taunts, challenges and open defiance from Premier Hepburn of Ontario led to a reversal of policy by the Mackenzie King government over power export licenses, it was charged in the House of Commons by Hon. Earl Rowe (Cons., Dufferin-Simcoe), leader of the Ontario Conservative party.

In a fighting speech that featured the opening of the long-awaited power debate, the Ontario leader who was defeated in the provincial elections came out definitely against exportation of power. He charged the government with evading its responsibilities by transferring from itself to parliament the obligation of passing on applications for power export licenses, such as the one pending from Premier Hepburn.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King opened the debate by proposing reading of the government bill which would clothe parliament with power to pass on export applications. He said even so it might be necessary to establish a committee mission, patterned along the lines of the proposed transport commission, to handle such subjects as power export licenses.

The attitude of the Ontario premier had nothing to do with the government's power policy, Mr. King declared, claiming it was based on two export applications from Quebec which were received before Premier Hepburn applied last week.

Three or four times Mr. Rowe taunted the prime minister in an effort to find out how he would vote on the private bill which will follow, embodying Premier Hepburn's application. Each time there was no reply.

Exportation of power was a national, even an international, policy and should not depend on a private bill, the Ontario Conservative leader declared. He said an issue of such magnitude should have the leadership of the prime minister. Instead of that, the government, evading its responsibilities, was "hiding behind the possibility of a private bill" and running for cover.

Mr. Bennett, Conservative leader, asked why a government should not risk its life on a vital subject like power exportation. "It was his duty to take a vital subject," he said, "should be left to the caprice of an unguided, leaderless opinion in a free parliament lobbied as 'we have seen' it lobbied in days gone by."

Private legislation, such as the government legislation now in the air, was sure to lead to big business, Mr. Bennett declared. Lobbies had operated in the past and they would increase under this legislation.

"Here we are told," Mr. Bennett continued, "a private member can introduce a bill to usurp the functions of government and provide for the export of the life of the country's industry." He doubted the constitutional position of a private bill which affected government revenues such as inspection costs.

Mr. Bennett joined other Conservative members in opposing any power exports but he promised to elaborate his views on this phase later.

Planes For Survey Work

Five Being Sent For Federal Operations In West

Ottawa.—The Royal Canadian Air Force has almost completed preparations for the photographic operations for the different government departments, the national defence department said. Ten planes are being allotted again to this work.

Five planes will be sent to the drouth area of Saskatchewan and Alberta as soon as the snow melts. The detachment will continue detailed survey work until the ice breaks in the Great Slave lake area when the planes will change to floats to fly into the Yellowknife district. When this work is completed the planes will return to the prairies by way of Lake Athabasca where opening up of a new mining area has created demand for detailed maps.

Rome.—The Fascist grand council went into session to determine Italian policy on foreign and domestic questions. Although foreign relations were first on the agenda, the subject probably will be deferred to permit development of conversations with Great Britain.

CABINET CRISIS DOESN'T STOP PREMIER'S DAILY WALK

There may be a cabinet crisis in the Mother country, but it does not stop Premier Chamberlain from enjoying his daily constitutional—walk through the park. With him are Mrs. Chamberlain and Lord Swinburn, British Secretary for Air, who appears to be on the verge of expounding an international problem, or maybe it was merely to remark on the beauty of the tulips in St. James' Park.

SOCIAL CREDIT PRO-

GRAMME UPSET

The whole caboodle of legislation whereby the Aberhart government planned on introducing Social Credit has been dissolved by the Supreme Court of Canada, and things are just where they were.

The court held that the Credit of Alberta Regulations act was unconstitutional, and this knocked out the entire Social Credit plan. The same treatment was given the Taxation of Banks act, which legislation was nothing but a punitive measure.

The act "to ensure the publication of accurate news and information" was also held unconstitutional. This was a retaliatory measure against the press of the province. Finally the supreme court declared that the federal government had power to disallow provincial legislation and lieutenant-governors had power to reserve their assent from provincial legislation, subject only to any instructions from the attorney-general.

It is fortunate for the people of Alberta that the supreme court entered these decisions. The Aberhart government was well on its way to setting up an arrogant autocracy. Had the legislation upheld, this province would have been subjected to a regimentation of people and an invasion of popular rights and privileges, such as has never before been experienced in a democratic country.

The objective of the legislation appeared to be the driving from this province of the established banking institutions, the substituting thereof of government credit houses and the domination of the newspapers in order that criticism might be suppressed and the people made docile. We would have had a "New Germany" on Canadian soil.

The record of the government to date is most uninspiring. It has shown an inexperience in business and legal affairs that has caused endless confusion and a great deal of expense. It has exhibited a disregard for the decency of parliamentary ethics, an insatiable lust for power and money and a complete ignorance of the established order of things.

The whole experience is just another good theory gone wrong.—The Hanna Herald.

MAY BE WILL OF DOMINION

There is now considerable speculation regarding the fate of Alberta's Social Credit Act. The Dominion can disallow an act of a provincial legislature within one year from the time it was assented to by the lieutenant-governor. The Social Credit Act received assent April 14, 1937. This leaves four weeks yet for disallowance. Chief Justice Duff has rendered an opinion that the act is unconstitutional. An opinion, however, is not a judgment, but Chief Justice Duff's eminence as a lawyer gives his opinion great weight. The fact that a government allows an act does not make it constitutional, though it makes it law—until it is tested in court. The Dominion government can allow the Social Credit Act to become law, and stand the tests of the courts, or it can disallow it, and settle the "Alberta Experiment."—Ex.

THAT GREAT FARE!

Premier Aberhart has made quite a harrowing story of the many Alberta children who were being clothed in flour sacks, and telling how he would look after these needy youngsters. Recently an Alberta editor went to a local store and got quotations on an outfit for a little girl of about ten years. Nothing elaborate, yet sufficient to be comfortable and tidy, and certainly better than flour sacks. The following is the list: pair of boots, $1.95; two suits combinations, $1.85; two pairs cotton stockings, 70 cents; slip, 75 cents; Jersey knit dress, $1.75—total $7.00.

Our Social Credit government recently decided to vote their members an increase of $200 each indemnity. There are 63 members, which makes a total increase of $12,600 that the members have grabbed off for themselves. Divide this $12,600 by $7.00, the amount necessary to outfit one 10-year-old girl, and we get 1800. This means that our legislators are willing to take the clothing off the backs of 1800 needy children.

Think this over the next time you hear Mr. Aberhart over the radio telling of the dire distress of our people. We believe you will then be justified in questioning his sincerity.

Out of the 63 members of the house, we understand 17 voted against the indemnity increase, and that the 17 did not include E. O. Duke, member for Rocky Mountain, or Rev. Roy Taylor, member for Pincher Creek and deputy speaker, who is drawing down a nice fat emolument for a few weeks of service.

Believed to be the first time the Hungarian flag has been seen in Newfoundland waters, the Hungarian steamship Hyugat recently arrived in Port aux Basques. The ship is registered at Budapest, capital of Hungary, which is located inland on the River Danube. Hungary has no seaport, hence very few sea-going ships belong to that country.

In a statement of claim filed at the Calgary court house by the Motor Car Supply Company of Canada, with head offices in Calgary, the Supreme Court is asked to declare the Alberta Social Credit Act, the Licensing of Trades and Businesses Act, 1937, and regulations made by order-in-council under the Licensing of Trades and Industries Act, ultra vires.

The 1938 session of Canada's Peace Parliament, the sixteenth national conference of the League of Nations Society in Canada, a federation of organizations and an association of individuals advancing a complete world peace programme, will be held at the Chateau Laurier hotel, Ottawa, on Sunday evening to Tuesday evening, May 22-23-24.

Aberhart very often exhorts his hearers to love one another. Of course, they look to him as a pattern and notice how "he loveth the banks, the press, the Liberals, the Conservatives, the Dominion government—and last, but not least: himself, his pockets, and what can be extracted from the poor starving tax-payers and the treasury. Greater love hath no man!

During the period of Aberhart's election campaign, hundreds of useless characters from other provinces and other parts of the world decided to flock to this new heaven, in the hope of getting something big for nothing. It's just too bad that Alde had not arranged to grant them free entry, for they may have been of some use to him when the next vote is taken.

It's just too bad that, after hearing all that useless hot air over the radio between 3 and 5 on Sunday afternoons, it should be necessary for the government to enquire how far the government's support to agriculture should be distributed. Really, the soil of Alberta should be sufficiently pepped up by now—and for that please thank the poor suckers who sponsored the effort!

A FLIGHT OF FANCY—THE PREMIER VISITS THE PRISONERS

Premier—I gather from your remarks, gentlemen, that you don't like jail with hard labor—that you don't wish to join the noble array of martyrs who have suffered from righteousness.

George—That's it, Doc. We do not want to be made the goats.

Premier—Think of all the famous men who have been in jail for periods varying from twenty-four hours to a life time. Think of Daniel in the lions' den—

George—Save him for the Prophetic Bible Institute, Doc. Daniel was too tough to chew and the lions were a hundred years old and had false teeth.

Premier—Think of John the Baptist.

Joe—Head on a charger. No thanks!

Premier—Think of the Man In The Iron Mask.

George—Must have been poison gas in the neighborhood.

Joe—What we want, Doc, is not famous examples of more or less prolonged servitude, sometimes ending fatally for the victims; but something in the line of how we're going to get out of here and how soon.—By H. F. Gadsby, in The Montreal Standard.

FAMOUS LAST WORDS:

Premier Aberhart says it is up to Prime Minister King, and Ottawa is convinced that if Mr. Aberhart wishes to challenge the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada and refer his invalidated legislation to the Privy Council, it is strictly up to Mr. Aberhart. And Ottawa is right, as why should the Dominion Government, whose actions have been upheld in every instance by the Supreme Court of Canada, spend the people's money going to the Privy Council? Better call it a day, Mr. Aberhart, and forget all about your foolish legislation and any more hair-brained legislation.—Ex.

Each Needs What Other Produces

NO TWO REGIONS on earth have more in common than the Western and Eastern parts of Canada. Each needs what the other produces. The East needs wheat, and next to Great Britain it is among the outstanding buyers of prairie wheat. The East needs cattle—and bought last year from the West a quarter of a million head. The East needs butter, so it buys between 20 and 25 million pounds each year. Sheep, lambs, hogs, calves—the industrial East buys them by the trainload. To an extent not generally realized, the part of Canada that lies east of the Great Lakes provides the prairie with a tremendous market.

THE 2,500,000 PEOPLE of the three prairie provinces also need many things that are produced in the Maritimes, Quebec and Ontario. For instance, Dominion Textile Company's 7,000 workers, who live in six Quebec towns, make bed sheets, material for dresses, underwear, and shirts and scores of other necessary and useful textile goods. They sell these products all over Canada—including the West. In return, they buy from all over Canada—including the West.

THE CANADIAN NATIONAL PARKS ASSOCIATION

(From Canadian Motorist, July, 1937)

Ed. Note: The Canadian National Parks Association is a non-political organization, without governmental or party affiliations of any kind. No remuneration, save that of the satisfaction derived from public service, is received by anyone connected with the Canadian National Park's Association, as such, and the association obtains no financial support through government grant or from party funds. Its financial support is provided exclusively by patriotic, public-spirited Canadians, who seek the preservation of the best examples of the majestic scenery with which nature has lavishly endowed this Dominion, and the conservation of the native flora and fauna that these may continue in perpetuity to administer to the health, enjoyment and cultural development of our people, and, as great tourist attractions, contribute to their prosperity through the revenue derived from tourist traffic.

Those desiring to support this splendid work of the association, or desiring further information about it, should address their communications to W. J. Selby Walker, executive secretary, Canadian National Parks Association, 34 Lineham Block, Calgary, Alberta.

The remains of the late E. Scott Campbell were laid to rest at Coleman on Saturday afternoon last. The funeral was very largely attended. Following an impressive service at St. Paul's United church, conducted by the pastor, Rev. H. J. Bevan, the remains were laid to rest in the Coleman cemetery.

MEN WANTED

WANTED: Sixty-three men to offer themselves as candidates for election to the next Alberta legislature.

QUALIFICATIONS: Men who have made a success of their own business; ability to set the affairs of the province ahead of their own personal interests or even those of their communities; men who have never sat in any legislature; men who enjoy the confidence of the majority of the clear thinking people of their communities; men who proudly enjoy the honor of having their word regarded as highly as their bond; men who can rise above the tenets of any political faith for the greater service of their province.

PLATFORM: Their platform should consist of the following:

1. Enactment of a redistribution bill in the first session of the first legislature cutting down the provincial constituencies from 63 to 17.

2. Acceptance of any plan formulated by the house for selection of the 17 continuing members from the 63 elected.

3. Signed resignation of every man included on his nomination form, said resignation to take effect at the close of the first session.

4. Reduction of the provincial cabinet to five members.

5. Enactment of a genuine Recall Act operative by signatures of twenty-five per cent of bona fide voters of the last election.

6. Immediate commencement of re-funding negotiations of the public debt and proportionate reduction of taxation.

It matters not what collective name is chosen for this new group, nor yet from what political parties they come, providing the men selected for the job have made a success of their own business.

This is a big job to be undertaken by men of wide vision, untrammelled by petty prejudices and desires, solely concerned with the task of putting Alberta back into the place she has been forced from during the past three years.

Applications may be made to your local weekly newspaper.

Who will be the first applicant?—Grande Prairie Herald.

To some it seems that at the present time better roads would be of far greater importance than additional baths, hot and cold water, etc., in Alberta hotel rooms. Pretty soon the weather will be so warm that a person wanting a bath can go and take a dump in a lake.

R. E. Donkin, of Frank, representing Sentinel Lodge, A.F. & A.M., Hiltcrest, and W. H. Chappell, representing Rocky Mountain Lodge, attended the 40th anniversary celebration of North Star Lodge at Lethbridge on Monday evening. Ben Burrell, well known C.P.R. engineer, was an honor guest on this occasion, being the first candidate to be initiated following the institution of the North Star Lodge.

The premier of Alberta says "Saskatchewan's only hope lies in Social Credit." Yes, that's where Alberta's hope lies, and will lie and never come out of it. If Saskatchewan people have been watching the progress of Social Credit in Alberta, they no doubt have made up their minds about it long ago, and there should be no necessity for the Alberta gang to spread their farce any further.

Near enough to collapse is what any listener in could judge from Albert's broadcast on Sunday last. Better far for him he had never ventured before the "mike." Fumbled words and utterances marked his entire broadcast, from which anyone could judge nothing else but that the great disciple was nearing his last flick. We join with the majority in Alberta today in expressing our sympathy with his followers, and congratulating Albert on his financial success so far.

NEW SPEED LIMIT

ALBERTA TOWNS

Raising of the speed maximum from 20 to 25 miles per hour in towns and villages is provided for in a bill to amend the Motor Vehicles and Highway Traffic Act which is now before the Alberta legislature. The measure is sponsored by Hon. E. C. Manning, provincial secretary.

When explaining the bill to the house, the minister said the purpose of the change was to make it applicable to charges of reckless driving. So far as the speed limits were concerned, these were matters for regulation by municipal by-law.

When a car was found to have been travelling at a speed of more than 25 miles per hour in towns and villages, this would be regarded as prima facie evidence of reckless driving, said Mr. Manning.

Another change in the act, is to provide that a motor vehicle about to cross a main highway must come to a stop not less than 10 feet from the highway, in order to ensure greatest safety. The bill as originally drafted provided for 30 feet but on the suggestion of officials of the Alberta Motor Association, a change to 10 feet was made by the minister and approved by the house.

One of the objections to the 30 foot proposal was that the car would be too far back from the highway in some places for the driver to have a clear view before proceeding over the crossing.

Evan Gushul, of Blairmore, nephew of the late D. Macko, attended the funeral in Calgary on Saturday last. Chief mourners were his wife, formerly Miss Lillian Jenkins, of Calgary; Miss Jane Losom, a friend of Mrs. Macko, and Dr. and Mrs. Field, of Edmonton. Mrs. Bakaj, of Coleman, is a cousin of the deceased. Mr. Macko for a number of years was accountant in the general office of the International Coal Coke Co. at Coleman.

The death of S. P. Hunter, well known old-timer, occurred at Pincher Creek on Friday last, sixteen days after the passing of Mrs. Hunter. He was operated upon a week after Christmas and never fully recovered. He is survived by his son, Charles and two daughters, Mrs. George Marcellus and Mrs. Otto Schoen, both of Pincher Creek. A brother and sister reside in the United States. The remains were laid to rest on Monday afternoon.

The remains of the late Lawrence Ford were laid to rest in the Blairmore cemetery on Sunday afternoon, following an impressive service held in St. Luke's Anglican church at 3 p.m., conducted by Rev. A. S. Partington. The choir of the church was augmented for the occasion by members of St. Alban's choir. "The Old Rugged Cross" was feelingly sung. By Miss Lena Fraser. Large numbers of relatives and friends of deceased from Coleman were in attendance. Floral tributes were numerous and beautiful, testifying to the esteem and respect in which deceased was held.

Editor King of the Claresholm Local Press, on his return from an extended holiday trip along the Pacific coast as far south as California, commented: "Since we did not see an Alberta daily paper while away for the three weeks, we missed the political excitement. But don't let anybody delude you into thinking the eyes of the world are on Alberta. We found that very few people knew or cared where Alberta was. When we'd say 'Alberta is in Canada,' they'd respond with 'Well, I guess it's pretty cold up there' or 'I suppose you've seen the quintuplets.' Never once did an outsider ask us about Albert's Social Credit. But our Alberta Social Crediters are doing very nicely for themselves in salary increases. Seems as if we have heard certain criticisms of the power of money and finance. The boys better watch out or they'll be infected with the money bug."

KEEPING THE BODY STRONG

Golden text: Now therefore be-ware, I pray thee, and drink no wine nor strong drink and eat not any unclean thing. Judges 13:4.
Lesson: Mark 6:53-56; Judges 13:12-14; 1 Corinthians 3:16, 17; Romans 12:1, 2.
Devotional reading: 1 John 2:12-17.

Explanations and Comments

Jesus Ministers to the Health of the Body. Mark 6:53-56. From the plain on the north-eastern side of the Sea of Galilee, Jesus and his disciples had crossed over in their boat to the Plain of Gennesaret south of Capernaum. Here the eagerness of the people for healing detained him for some time. They came to him from all regions round about, bringing the sick on their beds to be healed. Wherever he went it was always the same, whether in cities or villages or country, the sick were laid down in the market-place and the people pressed forward to touch even the border of his garment and be healed.

A Very Strong Argument for Temperance. 1 Corinthians 3:16, 17. Writing to the Corinthian Christians, Paul questions: "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man destroyeth the temple of God, him shall God destroy: for the temple of God is holy, and such are ye." Where could one find a better reason for temperance than is rooted in this brief passage? It is a tremendous thought that our body is a temple of the living God and that therefore anything that would defile it or injure it or prevent it from carrying out the divine purpose must be avoided.

The Consecrated Life. Romans 12:1, 2. In the preceding chapters of this Epistle to the Romans, Paul has been talking about the mercies of God and now he writes "Therefore, in view of God's mercies, I beseech you to present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your spiritual service." "By bodies" Paul suggests all the activities of the earthly life; and the consecration of these he describes as "a living sacrifice, and your 'spiritual service'." Christians are not to pattern themselves on the present order of things fashioned according to the world, but to accept such a change in themselves, a change of mental outlook, that they will be able to discern the will of God—what is good and well-pleasing and ideal.

CANCER AND RACE

Professor Walter Fischer, pathological anatomist in the University of Rostock, Germany, has recently reported the results of his investigations of cancer and race. This report shows that the various European races present no marked differences with regard to the total of cancer as judged by the mortality.

The Jewish population within the large cities of Europe shows the same incidence of cancer and only occasionally differences in respect to localization.

In the United States the incidence of cancer is the same among all women, white or black, whereas the disease is much more frequent among male negroes than among white men. Among Japanese and apparently among Chinese, cancer is about as prevalent as it is among Europeans.

Manifest differences in the most common seats of cancer exist among the yellow races, the Malays and the negroes of South Africa. In the yellow races primary cancer of the liver (with cirrhosis) is most frequently encountered. Cancer of the stomach is extremely infrequent among Malays. Sarcomas are commoner among the coloured races than among the whites. Fischer believes that the differences observed in the incidence and location of cancer are to be attributed to environmental influences and not to inherited factors.

Betel-nut chewers are very prone to have mouth cancer. One sees the same thing in people living as close to each other as the Dutch and the English. Breast and uterine cancer are twice as frequent among Englishwomen as among the Dutch women. The same thing is true when the total mortality from the disease is counted it will be found that this total is about the same for each country.

The Greatest Gift

Is Enabling Every Person To Do Something For Himself

No man, no honest man, wants coddling. A fair chance to help himself is all he asks. If blind or deaf or crippled, still for himself he speaks no more. The greatest gift one person can give another, Helen Keller has said over and over, is not to do something for him, but to enable him to do something for himself.

A case in point is Miss Keller herself, to men everywhere the symbol of a fruitful life grown from a blighted blossom . . . through patient nurture by a friend. March 3, the 31st anniversary of Keller's first meeting with her teacher, was observed as National Helen Keller Day, in aid of the blind. Civic and service club groups, which, on many fronts are doing much to help the blind and incapacitated, may wish to remember this word from her: "The heaviest burden on the blind is not blindness, but idleness." — Rotarian Magazine.

Had Wrong Idea

Farmer Did Not Quite Understand Remark Of Minister

The new minister was extremely enthusiastic about foreign missions, and one of his first self-appointed tasks upon coming to the parish was to call upon all of his neighbors whom he knew to have money, and enlist their support.

"I'm sorry," replied one wealthy farmer, "but it's no use asking me. I don't approve of foreign missions."

"But surely," the minister persisted, "you know that we are commanded to feed the hungry?"

"That may be," came the grim reply, "but surely we can feed 'em on something cheaper than missionaries."

Anglo-American Friendship

Best Safeguard of Peace Seems To Be In Rearmament

Several things have lately been announced, spoken and arranged, which add force to hope—at all events to the hopes of those who believe that the best safeguard of peace is found in British rearmament, especially in British sea-power, and in the closest Anglo-American co-operation.

There is the matter of recruitment for the Royal Navy, of which official figures have been given for the years 1930-1937. These stood still at 2,600 entries for 1930 and 1931, and have since then advanced steadily to 11,508 for 1937. Moreover, the number needed for the current year, over 16,000, is regarded as precluding no difficulty. Indeed, it is much easier to want to be a sailor, either officer or rating, than to get to sea, which is his supply tent, and they're all of the best too.

There is the talk and the fact of co-operation between the fleets of the British Empire and the United States of America, which has proved itself when troubles have come in Far Eastern waters. "If misfortune should overtake us"—Rear Admiral Brumby, commander of the Fifth United States naval district, was speaking at a luncheon in honor of H.M.S. Apollo—"I am sure I will see our navy side by side in meeting."

So we do, and so we should. And so say all of us—The Navy (London).

FLIN FLON

"The Story of Its Finding and Position To-Day"

By FRATT KUHN

While at Island Falls I found that Jeff Hunt-Hay was coming back to go up to Rocky Falls on Roundhead Lake, another 60 miles away, so I went there, as men and supplies were being flown in from Island Falls to erect cribbing baffle dams restraining the water from Reindeer Lake (which is a mere 176 miles long, 40 miles wide, but averaging five miles and in some places 800 feet deep and an area of 2,300 square miles) from rushing down Reindeer River into the Churchill and thus to the power plant at Island Falls.

About 40 men were on the job, just starting. They and their machinery and supplies had all been flown in and the engineer in charge was O. L. Flanagan of Toronto for the Fraser River Co.

Here I met the famous flying trapper of the early days, Del Simons, who now lives at Island Falls with his family. He is in charge of cruising and is a magnificent man of 200 odd pounds and about six feet tall.

Six miles from Rocky Falls there's still a Hudson Bay Post on an island, and fur trading is carried on with the Indians and trappers. I was told there's a flyer named Turnbull from Flin Flon, who is commercially fishing this lake and he takes out whitefish four to 15 pounds, trout up to 40 pounds, pickerel, grayling, herring and sturgeon. Roundhead Lake, by the way, is the natural water route from The Pas.

I joshed the cook because I told him that all he had to do now was heat water for tea or coffee and wash up. This is literally true, because here's the food brands I found in his supply tent, and they're all of the best too:

Gardening

Most people realize that all vegetables deteriorate in storage. The early potatoes are always tastier than those coming out of rusty cellars this month. The former taste better because they are not ripe. To test this quality in all vegetables experienced gardeners spread their seedling season over a period of weeks. They realize that vegetables deteriorate in the garden just as they do in storage and so they always have a few feet of lettuce and a row or two of spinach, corn, beets and practically everything else coming on rather than the whole garden maturing at one time.

There is nothing to equal fresh peas, tender and juicy, when taken right out of the garden and put in the pot, but if the same peas are left in the vines for three or four days after they are ready, the best flavour has gone.

To have a succession of really tender vegetables, one is advised to make at least three sowings from the one packet, at intervals of from ten days to two weeks, and to still further extend the season by using early, medium and late varieties. For instance, by using leaf lettuce for the early crop, head lettuce for June and July and again in the Fall, and Coe lettuce for the very hot weather, a fresh, tender supply of this salad material is available all season.

Horticulturists invariably advocate purchasing seed and other garden stock from a source which caters to Canada, and Canadian conditions. While all seeds and nursery stocks sold by Canadian firms are not necessarily produced in Canada, they are carefully chosen to give the best results under Canadian conditions.

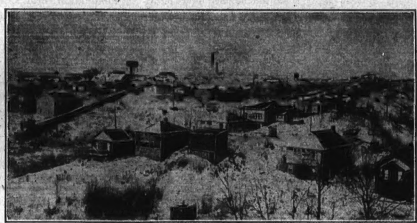

There are some people who are afraid to make a change once a garden or home is laid out. But with most plants a change is good for the plants themselves. This does not mean that perennials should be dug up and replanted each spring, but with many of the perennials and annuals a change, overcrowding and deterioration will result from too long residence in one spot. True, there are certain species which do better in one location than another. Some flowers must have full sun, and some must have shade. Any seed catalogue will list these different tastes. But there are usually a score or more which have these special preferences and one may be used one season and another.

Fogs Are Expensive

Estimate Of Annual Cost To London Places Figure At $200,000,000

Fogs over London have always had a romantic implication for fiction purposes, but never for the everyday life of Londoners. The dark pall which falls over the city has been a scourge to be borne patiently. Although bringing untold losses in time and money, and often completely upsetting winter social life, the fog was accepted as unavoidable.

Like Mark Twain's comment on the general subject of weather, much was said about it, but little done. Now, at last, it appears that the British Air Force, and the Ministry of Health is planning a determined campaign to eliminate fog by attacking its chief cause—smoke.

A conference of local authorities has been called, and the laws affecting smoke abatement are to be tightened. During the past 20 years modern methods of combustion have made the London atmosphere considerably cleaner. The modern "pea soup," although lighter, is still sufficiently akin to that gray-brown blanket which formerly covered the city to affect respiration. And one estimate of the annual cost of fog to the nation's industry places the figure at $200,000,000.

The Ice Cream Province

People In Ontario Appear To Be Fond Of Product

Ontario, it seems, is the ice cream province of Canada. Her people eat, on the average, a gallon each year in addition to what is made for them "on the spot" in homes, and also in ice cream parlors, restaurants and hotels which make their own supply. Ontario's gallon (the 1936 figure) compares with a gallon and a half which the average resident of the province sated away in the boom days of the late '20s. It compares with only two-fifths of a gallon per capita in Quebec and a Canadian average of two-thirds of a gallon.

Canada in 1925 produced 5,900,000 gallons; in 1929, 9,800,000. By 1933, the worst depression year, production had fallen again to 5,700,000. Since then it has climbed steadily and was 7,600,000 gallons in 1936. The value was $9,000,000, compared with $13,600,000 in the peak year.

In 1936 nearly 9 per cent of the total gallons of ice cream produced in Canada was made in Ontario.—Toronto Star.

Dominion Marksman Association officials announced Sgt. Andy Ford of "K" division of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police at Edmonton has won the coveted, expert shield awards with a perfect score of 6,000 out of a possible 6,000 points with a 22 sporting rifle.

Sergeant Ford, former official broncho-buster for western detachments of the R.C.M.P., fired 200 consecutive bulls-eyes from a standing position on a 20-yard range, then repeated his perfect score from sitting and prone positions. Ford is a former winner of the individual high score trophy in the Dominion Marksman R.C.M.P. revolver competition.

2 Steps in Fighting Discomfort of COLDS

No family need neglect even minor colds.

Here is what to do: Take two "Aspirin" tablets when you feel a cold coming on—with a full glass of water. Then repeat, if necessary, according to directions in each package. Relief comes rapidly.

The "Aspirin" method of relief is the way many doctors now approve. You take "Aspirin" for relief—then if you are not improved promptly, you call the family doctor. "Aspirin" tablets are made in Canada. "Aspirin" is the registered trademark of the Bayer Company, Limited, of Windsor, Ontario. Look for the name Bayer in the form of a cross on every tablet.

Opinion Of Health Authority

People Eat Improper Food And Too Much Of It

The average man should be able to live to at least 80 years of age, and proper diet should bring about this lengthening of the life span, Dr. Victor G. Heiser, United States public health authority and author, said at Montreal.

"We have increased the average life span already," Dr. Heiser told reporters, "but we have increased the average only by cutting down infantile and child mortality. We have not increased the actual span of life very much. The man of between 35 and 40 to-day stands just as much chance of dying as he did 100 years ago."

Next great task of medical science will be to keep man from committing slow suicide as he does at present, said the doctor, adding that he intended to devote the remainder of his life to the study of diet.

In Montreal to address the Women's Canadian Club, Dr. Heiser expanded to reporters on the importance of diet. He told how Sir Robert McCarrison in England fed 1,000 rats a balanced diet for two years and fed a similar number the same kind of food as the people in his English town. He killed the rats and made a post-mortem examination of each. There was no sign of disease or organic disorder in those fed the balanced diet. The others, who had eaten "just what they wanted," had all the diseases to be found in an average hospital.

"They had enlarged adenoids, gastritis, bad tonsils, arthritis—all the diseases common to the people of the neighborhood," said Dr. Heiser.

"This bears out my belief," he said, "that the average man eats at least twice as much as he needs, and that the excess food acts just as excess fuel does on a boiler. It wears him out."

Man's fight against disease knows no national boundaries, he said in his club address. Public health authorities all over the world fought shoulder to shoulder against disease.

Nearing End Of Growth

Illinois Boy Is Tallest Human In Medical History

Robert Wadlow, of Alton, Ill., tallest human in medical history, who has observed his 20th birthday, is nearing the end of his phenomenal growth, according to physicians. Measurements revealed Wadlow is 8 feet 8½ inches tall. He weighs 465 pounds. Records examined showed the youth's rate of growth in the last four years has diminished one-half inch each year. He grew only one and a half inches last year. Between the ages of nine and twelve he averaged from four to five inches of growth each year.

People on the Pacific coast are at last getting an answer to that old question, "Where do salmon go?" It seems that they go into a floating Japanese salmon cannery.

WHAT HO!

—By—
RICHARD CONNELL
By Arrangement With Thomas Allen, Publisher, Toronto.

"Oh, dear, oh, dear," said the earl, with a stricken look, "I believe I did mention a few things to old Bumpy Reddington in the club. Completely forgot they call him the Wireless Duke because telling him anything is equivalent to broadcasting it. I'm truly most extraordinarily sorry, Ernest."

"Oh, it doesn't matter," said Ernest, and the thought that the circulation of London papers in rural Iowa is infinitesimal comforted him.

Crump announced that Captain Duff-Cooper was calling. The captain snatched, in looking very smart and superior in his dinner suit. He greeted Rosa and the earl cordially, but his nod to Ernest was right out of the refrigerator.

"Dribble of coffee, Esme?" asked the earl.

"No, thanks."

"Scotch and splash, then?"

"Thank, Thanks."

"Ernest," said the earl, "has very kindly consented to allow the Hunt Ball to be held here."

"Descent of him," said the captain.

"Esme will mount you, said the earl to Ernest."

"Mount me?"

"Don't look so alarmed, my boy," said the earl. "I use the term in the hunting, not the taxidermy sense."

"You'll find Fin McCool a headstrong brute, Bingley," said the captain. "I had him out to-day. He's deuced crafty at taking walls though not half bad at hedges and brooks. But he has lots of fire and fire in him, and you'll enjoy riding him, I know."

Captain Duff-Cooper's chafed feelings were not a field on which emotions played, but Ernest thought he detected in the captain's eye a glint which could only be described as malicious.

"Thank you, Captain," Ernest said. "But I think I won't go fox-hunting. I have no shot-gun."

Emotion did visit the face of Duff-Cooper then. Shock and horror showed there. The man who awoke to find tarantulas nesting in his beard was not more appalled than the captain at that moment.

"Come now, Ernest," said the earl. "You must not spoof Esme about fox-hunting. It's his religion, you know."

"I do hope you'll be with us on the hunt, Ernest," Rosa said.

"Are you hunting, Rosa?" he asked.

"Of course."

"Girl hasn't missed a meet since she was nine," said the earl. "And I've missed only three or four in forty years. One of them was three years ago when poor Gerald Murrell broke his neck at Lester's Wall; and last year I was laid up with a cracked collar-bone I got at the same spot."

"I think I won't hunt this year," said Ernest. "Next year perhaps."

"Ah, too bad," said the captain's lips, but his eyes said "I thought so."

"Sorry I must stay on the sidelines," said Ernest. "But I've no proper riding clothes with me, you know."

Crump, who had come in to clear away the coffee cups, spoke up.

"Beg pardon, Mr. Bingley," the butler said, "but may I offer a suggestion?"

"Do, Crump."

"It so happens," said Crump, "that various gentlemen have presented me with articles of wearing apparel. I've quite a collection, sir, including some pink coats, boots and so on, which I personally, do not wear. Would you mind standing up, sir?"

Ernest stood up, looking the helpful Crump. The butler ran an appraising eye over Ernest's shape and dimensions.

"I think I've just the thing," Crump said. "You and Lord Chidester are about of a size."

"Thank you, Crump," said Ernest, "but I feel sure his lordship would object to my wearing his clothes."

"Oh, no, sir. Not he," said Crump. "He'll never hunt again, poor young gentleman. Since his mishap at Lester's Wall he has been confined in a sanitarium, sir."

"Tricky jump that," said Captain Duff-Cooper. "Why, I almost came a cropper there myself to-day. Fin McCool refused."

Ernest Bingley felt a strong desire to follow Fin McCool's example; but the look in the captain's eyes touched of the same spring that men like the captain had touched in Ernest's revolutionary war ancestors.

"Please bring the clothes to my room tomorrow, Crump," said Ernest.

"Very good, sir."

"I hope they sit," said Lady Rosa.

"I hope so, too," said Ernest, and the angels chattered up a lie against him.

"Fin McCool will be ready for you, Bingley," said the captain.

"And I'll be ready for Fin McCool," said Ernest.

After all, he thought, luck had been with him so far. He would trust once more to that capricious goddess. A fortnight is two weeks, and surely, he thought, in fourteen days he could invent a plausible alibi.

"As it's to date to go to a cinema, I shall go to bed," the earl said. And off he went.

Captain Duff-Cooper looked meaningfully at Ernest, but Ernest did not take the hint. After a desultory conversation, enjoyed by none of the trio, the captain departed, cracking his knuckles as he went.

"I'm glad you're hunting with us, Ernest," Rosa said. "A respect for good horsemanship has been bred in me. I don't think I could ever be much interested in a man who didn't like horses and riding."

"I love horses," Ernest said. "Crazy about them."

"I'm so glad."

"Suppose you go up to your room get a paper and pencil, and try to figure out the answer," Rosa said.

She had said good night and was gone before Ernest could rally from the impact of her words.

"Golly!" he said. "Golly! Can she mean all shades of course she can't. I guess I've really gone cuckoo, imagining things like that. But the way she looked at me just now! Golly!"

He went up to bed and stumbled over only two objects on the way there.

CHAPTER VIII.

Fourteen days was a long time when you are in jail, and a short time when you are in love.

They tipped by Ernest Bingley like motorcycle racers on a half-mile track. Sometimes, in those analytical moments which come to a man just before he falls asleep, or those depressed moments which come just after he wakes up, Ernest felt that he was living in a fool's paradise.

He was certain about the paradise part of it, in any event, as he explored the charms of the English countryside, often with Lady Rosa as his guide and companion, or investigated the castle, his castle, stone by stone.

The whole world, he said to himself, is a fool's paradise, and the real fool is the one who does not enjoy it while he can. So, pursuing this opportunist philosophy, he snatched his fingers at the future, squelched upstart worries about Fin McCool, the danger of exposure, Lester's Wall, his finances, the ogre Punder, and the other thorns on his rose.

He was in an exalted frame of mind as he set out for a walk on a golden, sparkling morning. Behind him loomed Bingley Castle, to-day a seething cauldron, for it was the day before the hunt, and guests, servants, and an avalanche of luggage had begun to pour into the historic pile. Haughty, hooded horses were arriving in vans, and the stable-yard swarmed with bow-legged groomers in stocks and gaiters, talking knowledge of mature equine.

It was not pleasant alone, nor the need of exercise that sent Ernest at a steady pace over hill and dale for a good four miles. He had a purpose, a mission.

As a previous ramble he had spied a fox entering its den in a copse not far from that ill-omened barrier, Lester's Wall. Ernest, hidden behind a bush, had watched the goings and comings of the graceful creature for an hour. His goal now was this den, and his intention was to warn the fox to stay at home on the morrow, or, at least there seemed to be no feasible way of conveying to the doomed animal the tip that some serious dependents of the gun, with a hoof-behind each, were going to scrag up on it. Ernest hoped he could scare it and cause it to flee to some safe and distant spot.

He reached Lester's Wall, which, or so it seemed to him, was notched like a dependant's gun, with a hoof-behind for each hunter who had come to greet attempting to jump it. He counted sixteen snifter nicks, and shuddered with each nick. The prospect that he might shortly find himself charging full tilt at it on the contumacious Fin McCool added nothing to his peace of mind. Then and there he resolved that he was not going to be the maker of the seventeenth nick.

The ancient problem: what would you do if you had a lion by the tail, hang on or let go, seemed kindergarten stuff to Ernest as he surveyed his own situation. To refuse to ride would be branded as a soft squatter. He did not care what Captain Duff-Cooper might think of him, but what Rosa Bingley might think of him seemed to Ernest the most important thing in the world.

If he didn't ride he risked a broken heart, if he did ride he risked a broken neck.

He had considered a dozen schemes for extricating himself from his arduous predicament, but they all seemed as full of holes as a tennis ball.

His anxious one-eyed morn could see through the ruse of being called to London on urgent business, he reflected. Besides it meant leaving his dearest-bought paradise for two days. He decided that, as a last resort, he could plead a sudden attack of illness, some mysterious American ailment like delayed seasickness, and, as for that, he was planned to eat a caterpillar or two that his malingerer would not lack in verisimilitude.

A Profitable Industry

New Brunswick Has Largest Fox Ranch in British Empire

In 25 years the fox-breeding industry has transformed the Westmorland County community of Salisbury, New Brunswick, from a drab hamlet into a bustling village where per capita wealth is greater perhaps than in any other rural part of New Brunswick.

The 25-mile radius around Moncton, a district including Salisbury, is said to contain more foxes than any other area of similar size in the world. In this district is the largest fox ranch in the British Empire, that of F. M. Colpitt, M.L.A., who pelts from 3,000 to 4,000 silver black each year.

Years ago a good silver black fox pelt sold for $2,500. Business girls could only dream of owning a silver fox neckpiece. Now they can buy one. Wealthy women who used to have scarves now have matched pelts.

Ranchers who once produced only a few pelts have now multiplied production that a silver black scarf is no longer a luxury worth its weight in gold. Instead it is within the scope of the average woman's pocketbook, although no less beautiful than before.

The industry has settled down to a steady basis. Prices remain much the same from year to year and offer good profits to efficient ranchers who have enough stock to carry their overhead. These breeders, earned profits during the depression.

The Colpitt's ranch has its own private factory where blouses are manufactured for the animals. Rabbits for feed are bought in carload lots. Scientific feeding and handling have supplanted hit-or-miss method of 20 years ago when a man paid a small fortune for a pair of breeders and either went broke or became wealthy.

Canada's Major Oil Field

British Empire Has A New Source Of Oil In The Turner Valley

Canada's Major Oil Field was the subject of an illustrated lecture by Dr. G. S. Hume of the Geological Survey, Department of Mines and Resources, to an audience at the National Museum in Ottawa.

Dr. Hume said oil was one of our vital resources, as it was used to turn the wheels of the world. The British Empire had a new oil field in Turner Valley, Alberta. After 23 years of exploratory drilling with much production of natural gas and naphtha, crude oil was produced in June, 1936, when the Turner Valley Royalties well was drilled. The new well has an initial flow of 650 barrels a day. This encouraged additional drilling, with the result that Turner Valley has now a potential production per day of 30,000 barrels of high grade oil, particularly suited for the making of gasoline.

At the conclusion of the lecture, the film, "Canada's Major Oil Field," was shown. This film was taken by Dr. Hume last summer, and shows the various stages in the locating, drilling and production of oil in Turner Valley.

First Grade Fir Timber

R.C. Supply Will Soon Be Exhausted

State Forestry Officials. Every few days one or other of the up-land ports reports the departure of a deep-sea freighter loaded with our best fir logs, going out of the country as unmanufactured timber to supply raw material for mills and export in foreign countries. The export is at the expense of our own industry and labor. It is proceeding while our forestry officials are warning that we have only a dozen left.

Another Wonderful Cure

Accidentally Discovered In New Mexico By Sheep Rancher

Discovery of a magnificent limestone cavern, with one vaulted chamber more than three miles long, has been reported at Carlsbad, New Mexico.

The great cave, said R. F. Burnet, curator of the Carlsbad Museum, rivals in beauty the famed Carlsbad Cavern near by and may be the largest in the world.

Carlsbad Cavern and another near Mexico City were vied for the title of the world's biggest "hole in the ground." Neither has been explored thoroughly.

Mr. Burnet led a small party of explorers through the tiny, hidden entrance, deep in the Guadalupe Mountains, twelve miles south of Carlsbad Cavern.

They found themselves in an immense underground room 700 feet wide and with a ceiling so high it could not be seen even by the aid of powerful flashlights.

The party pushed on for six hours, covering an estimated three miles. Only when the chamber made a sharp curve did they turn back, fearing that they might become lost in the labyrinth.

Huge, snow-white stalagmites, larger even than the 100-foot monoliths of Carlsbad Cavern, dotted the floor. Ancient Indian pottery and the bones of deer gave evidence that the cave once had been used for human occupancy.

Tom Tucker, a sheep rancher, stumbled onto the cave's entrance, 700 feet up the steep side of a mountain and concealed by a jutting rock.
